

Different Ways People Use Montana Today

A Lot of Montana is used for tourist spots including Buffalo Jump, West Yellowstone, Lewis and Clark, Big Sky, and Bozeman Ski Resort. Including many more places around Montana. Montana is also used for farming land for fresh vegetables and livestock. Coal is also a large part of our state. Thousands of miners work everyday to get millions of pounds of coal. We also carry natural gas and sapphires. With the land surrounded with gorgeous animals and mountains Montana has huge plains and even larger mountains. Montana also has some of the best colleges including MSU and UM. A long time ago prospectors came to Montana looking for gold they settled at Big Sky and forced the Native Americans out and made the land we call Montana today. Skiing is also a great thing here in Montana ranging from Green all the way to Double Black Diamond. They have ski slopes for all levels of skiers. There is also a section of Yellowstone in Montana the tourists come too. The tourists also come to see the big blue sky and gorgeous mountains. The locals of Montana also use the land for camping and going to lakes including Flathead Lake and many others. There are many museums in Montana that the people come and share like the Museum of the Rockies. Fly Fishing, fishing and hunting are lively in this state. With river full of trout and bass, do not forget the carp. With the fish also comes the grizzlies, elk, deer, and many more hunting animals. But don't forget the people that live here too. It is not just farming land and the animals that people come here for. They come here for the excitement and the mountains and to share this state with their fellow brothers and sisters.